The end result of the project will be to enable users of cochlear implants to hear better in noisy situations and listen to music. A cochlear implant is a small electronic devices that is surgically implanted in the inner ear to help people with certain types of deafness hear.

"In the near future, we envision patients being fitted with at least three distinct programs -- one they can use in relatively quiet environments, one for noisy environments and another for listening to music," said Dr. Philip C Loizou, a professor at UTD's Erik Jonsson School of Engineering and Computer Science.

Loizou's research will include cochlear implant patients from the Otolaryngology Department at The University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas, and will utilize UT Southwestern physicians and
